

5 easy ways you can help promote FixMyStreet

FixMyStreet.com is a project run by the charity mySociety. We don't have a huge marketing budget, and we can't stretch to putting up billboards all over the place.

So we rely on our users - people who have had a good experience using FixMyStreet, and want to help. Can you spread the word and make sure that more people know about us?

Here are a few ideas - some easy, some requiring a little more effort.

Do one, do a few, or do them all: everything helps!

1. Tell five people about fixmystreet.com.

If all our users did this, we'd soon multiply.

Now of course, we don't suggest that you barge into conversations and change the subject completely, but if people happen to be complaining about potholes or the like, let them know there's an easy way to get them fixed.

2. Get in on the debate.

When your local paper or radio station starts talking about issues such as fly-tipping or dog fouling, make sure they know about FixMyStreet. Ring in to the radio, or write a letter to your paper.

3. Share your reports

Social media maven? When you make a report on FixMyStreet, use the 'share' button at the foot of your report to tweet about it or publish it on Facebook.

4. Follow us

Follow us on Facebook or Twitter and if you see anything interesting, share or retweet it. This really helps to amplify our message to people who might not previously have heard of FixMyStreet.

5. Comment on the news and in forums

If you're browsing your local paper online, and there's a story about potholes or other street issues, leave a quick comment to say they can be reported on FixMyStreet. This also works for online forums!

Any more ideas? Let us know on hello@mysociety.org.

And thanks so much for your help. It really does make a difference.

another project from the lovely people at mySociety